Roland, long a leader in electronic music technology has finally developed low cost, modular synthesizer components. All the elements of a basic synthesizer plus accessories which have before now been either too complex or too expensive are included in the System 100. You can purchase them all at once for under $2000 or one component at a time. Mixing and monitoring is all self-contained so that you can begin at once to discover all the possibilities electronic music offers today's musician. Many major recording artists and studios have already purchased the System 100. Send in the coupon from this ad and we'll send you a detailed brochure of the unique features this new synthesizer has to offer.
